Acting (Part-time)
1981 - 1982 (1 year)

After some speech and singing training in 1981, Anatole auditioned for 2 semi-professional plays, in which he was successful in receiving key roles in both.

The first play were ""Find Me" by Owen Wymark was first performed in 1977, and is the true story of Verity Taylor, who grew up in the 60s and 70s, and whose extremely disruptive personality threw into sharp relief the inability of various institutions to be able to diagnose or cope with her problems. In the end, after setting fire to a chair in a mental hospital, Verity was committed to Broadmoor - a massively strict sentence for someone who needed help, not locking up. It's definitely not a comedy.

The second play was "Coriolanus" a tragedy by William Shakespeare, based on the life of the legendary Roman leader. This is one of Shakespeare's later plays, appearing circa 1607, following on the heels of landmark tragedies such as King Lear, Macbeth, and Antony and Cleopatra..
